

September 2006

Private Medical Insurance - UK

The health of the nation is a perennial pre-occupation in the UK, with endless debate as to how best to run the NHS. The current trend has been for an ever-growing involvement between private and public healthcare providers, with the NHS making extensive use of private hospitals. Where, however, does ...

July 2006

Home Insurance - UK

This report focuses on the UK's highly competitive domestic property insurance market. This sector, which constitutes just over a quarter of the personal lines general insurance market in terms of gross written premiums, has suffered from adverse market conditions over the last few years.